

Lawtonian to fish WBT premier event

Denese Freeman, a graphic designer whose passion is bass fishing will leave Tuesday, October 18 for Lake Lewisville near Dallas, Texas to compete in the premier tournament of the newly organized Women's Bass Trail. The trail was announced this summer at the Bassmaster's Classic in Pittsburgh, PA, much to the delight of women anglers in the United States, Canada and Japan. Over 100 boaters and 100 non-boaters have registered to participate in this history-making event.

Denese has enjoyed fishing most of her life and credits her mother for taking the time to teach her as a child how to catch different species of fish. She developed a love for tournament bass fishing after fishing a WBFA tournament on Grand Lake of the Cherokees with her sister Linda Berry of Madison, NC in August of 2002.

Denese is also the web designer and co-editor of a new online magazine for women anglers called ebassfish.com. Her other talents include wood and metal crafting.

The 2006 WBT season will include a return visit to Lake Lewisville as well as tournaments in Louisiana, Alabama, North Carolina and Arkansas. Denese plans to fish as many of the five tournaments as time and money will allow. She eventually plans to organize a women's bass club in Lawton.

Denese Freeman, a graphic designer whose passion is bass fishing will leave Tuesday, October 18 for Lake Lewisville near Dallas, Texas to compete in the premier tournament of the newly organized Women's Bass Trail. The trail was announced this summer at the Bassmaster's Classic in Pittsburgh, PA, much to the delight of women anglers in the United States, Canada and Japan. Over 100 boaters and 100 non-boaters have registered to participate in this history-making event.

Denese has enjoyed fishing most of her life and credits her mother for taking the time to teach her as a child how to catch different species of fish. She developed a love for tournament bass fishing after fishing a WBFA tournament on Grand Lake of the Cherokees with her sister Linda Berry of Madison, NC in August of 2002.

Denese is also the web designer and co-editor of a new online magazine for women anglers called ebassfish.com. Her other talents include wood and metal crafting.

The 2006 WBT season will include a return visit to Lake Lewisville as well as tournaments in Louisiana, Alabama, North Carolina and Arkansas. Denese plans to fish as many of the five tournaments as time and money will allow. She eventually plans to organize a women's bass club in Lawton.
